DARING EXPLOIT GAINS RENOWN FOR CAVALRYMAN

[By Latest Mail]

BERLIN, Germany.—Daring exploits which won quick renown for an Austrian cavalry officer in Galicia are related in newspaper correspondence from that section.

The Austrian headquarters had learned that the Russians were bringing forward reinforcements. Aviators were sent out to ascertain the size of them, but the weather was foggy, and the scouts were not able to find the Russians. An unnamed cavalry officer, who appears as the hero of the narrative, stepped forward and asked:

"Shall I ride through the lines?"

His superiors laughed at the bold offer but after some hesitation agreed to accept it when 15 other cavalrymen volunteered to make up the scouting party. By choosing the lonely forest road, the riders succeeded in their plan of passing through the Russian lines at night. By day they concealed themselves in deep thickets, but at night they boldly trotted along on the main highway with their Austrian uniforms covered with brown mottles and fur caps pulled down over their regulation helmets.

They met a Russian cavalry division led by a Cossack prince advancing to take part in the battle at the front, and their mounts almost touched flanks with the Russian horses as they passed by, unrecognized.

Late at night the Austrian party took refuge in a deserted farm house, where the men tried to sleep until morning. Before daybreak a murmur of voices was heard and a large party of Cossacks was seen approaching the place. The Austrians hurriedly mounted to the attic where they stood with carbines cocked, ready to shoot down the first Cossack who might show his face in the stairway. The Russians, however, contented themselves with a short stay on the first floor and then rode away without even inspecting the outbuildings, where the Austrians had stabled their horses.

The following night the little party of scouts rode along a path in the wooded hills where suddenly a Russian patrol barred their way with the cry of "Halt." The Austrians were motionless for a few seconds, their leader commanded "At them" and not one of the Russians escaped with his life.

Concealed next day in thickets, the Austrians were able to see heavy columns of Russians retreating along the nearby road. The Austrian advance had evidently begun. For hours the masses of infantry, artillery and baggage trains hurried by toward the adjacent river, crossing a temporary bridge. On the top of the hill beyond the river the Russians halted, apparently with the intention of taking up a position there.

The Austrian cavalry officer who was leading the scouting party had sent a handful of men across the river to watch the Russian movement. He feared this little group might be in danger and so decided upon the dare-devil trick of bluffing the Russians by charging the bridge with his little party. The dozen men galloped wildly across the fields toward the bridge. There they met the advance guard of their own infantry, and, encouraged by this, they dashed at the Russians who evidently believed large masses of Austrian cavalry were coming after them. They hastily resumed their retreat.

Former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey was re-elected president of the New Jersey state board of agriculture.
